Creating a ringtone for your iPhone from your favorite song can be a challenge, but it shouldn't be. That's how quickly to whip up a killer new tone right on your phone. There are many ringtone apps in the iOS app store. We've tested about a dozen of them, and they all have similar functionality. All the apps we tested required you to download music to your iPhone using iTunes instead of downloading it from the cloud or streaming music service. It remains to be seen how iTunes' retirement will affect these apps in the future. A surprising number of these apps also look for a weekly subscription update to unlock all the features that feels a little messy. Eventually we went with Ringtone Designer 2.0. Ringtone Designer 2.0 has all the basics you need - the ability to import the track and determine the positioning and length of the clip (30 seconds maximum). It also adds the ability to fade the clip in and out. There is a pro upgrade option available, but it is a one-time purchase for $0.99, not a subscription. The pro option allows you to create longer tones - up to 40 seconds. It also allows you to use the device's microphone to record any sound for use as a beep. With or without pro updates, this is a simple app to use. How to create a melody with Ringtone Designer 2.0 When you first launch the app, you get a screen splash with the Start button. Click on that. You'll be delivered to the iTunes library. For this tutorial, we'll use a track from the curiously popular U2 album from a few years ago. Go to the song you want to convert. When you find your song, click on it to open it in the editor. Once you choose the song, you can cut out the section you want. The interface is pretty simple: swipe left or right to move the position of the song, use arrow buttons on both sides to fine-tune the position of the song, and then use the capture buttons to change the length of the clip. The buttons at the bottom of the interface control the entire clip. Click on the button in the bottom left corner to rewrite from text tone to phone ringing - seven seconds, not thirty seconds. Click in the bottom right corner to disappear the clip in and out, making for a less jarring experience when your phone suddenly starts ringing at full volume. Once you've pinned down what you think is the perfect tone, click The Play button to give it a listen. Once you've set, click on the check mark in the top right corner to save the clip. As you get your new tone on your iPhone At the moment, you need to download the ringtone into the ringtones section of your iPhone. To do this, you need to connect your phone to your iTunes computer. Ringtone Designer 2.0 includes a link to a tutorial video that covers how to import this ringtone. This video is outdated, so here are some updated instructions using the latest and greatest version of iTunes that is about to be deleted. We will update this article with new instructions when Happens. At the moment, connect your phone to your computer and run iTunes. As soon as iTunes is open, tap the device icon in the top left corner. In the left column, click file sharing and then click on the Ringtones app. Click on the ringtone you created and then the Save button. Choose a place to save the ringtone. We recommend your desktop. Once saved, click on the Tones on the left side of iTunes. Drag the ringtone from your desktop to the tone area on the right side of iTunes. After that, just sync your iPhone. Ringtone is now on your iPhone. As you install your new ringtone to install the ringtone, go to the settings of the sounds. Click on Ringtone. Choose a ringtone from the list and you're all set. Adding new tunes is a simple and interesting way to customize your iPhone. If you want to change the default tone used for all calls or assign another ringtone to everyone in your address book, the iPhone makes it easy. Each iPhone comes with dozens of standard tones. If you want something more specific, such as a catchphrase from your favorite TV show or a chorus of your favorite song, there are apps that create tones from the songs you have. If you don't want to create a ringtone, go to the iTunes Store and download one or more. The instructions in this article apply to iPhones running iOS 12 or iOS 11. The iTunes Store sells tones just as it sells music. Buy a ringtone there and you can start using it as soon as it is loaded. To buy ringtones from your iPhone: Open the iTunes Store app on your iPhone. Click More (located in the bottom right corner). Click The Tones to go to the Melody section. The main screen of the Ringtones section is similar to the main screen of the Music section. To find the tones: Swipe through the featured tones at the top of the screen. Click Charts to view the most popular tones in different categories. Browse the collection of melodies. Click genres to view tones by genre. Click on the ringtone when you find a ringtone or category you're interested in. Click the search button. In the text search box, enter music, artist or show that you want a ringtone. Tap Ringtone's record on the search results screen. The screen populates with results for this particular ringtone. Click on the art album to the left of any ringtone to hear it. Click on the ringtone name to display the information screen. To buy a ringtone: Click on the price next to the ringtone. Choose to make this phone's default ringtone ringtone to make it the default text tone (a warning that plays out for text messages), or assign it to a specific person. If you don't want to do any of them, click Ready to continue buying it. If you are offered Apple ID (or authorize it via Touch ID or Face ID), type it in and click OK. When the purchase is complete, the ringtone is loaded onto the iPhone. To find the ringtone, open the Settings app and in the Sounds and Haptics section. We showed you how you can turn your (unprotected DRM) music collection into custom iPhone ringtones using GarageBand and iTunes on Mac, or software like ToneShop for Windows, but CyberNet tech site has made it easy for anyone with just a copy of iTunes for Windows to hack together their own tones. The main trick is to highlight the short section of the song in iTunes, export it to the unprotected AAC/M4A format, and then make a quick file extension switch and re-download it to iTunes. CyberNet details the process in more detail, of course, and this is a good fix for those who don't want to edit wave-shaped files just to rock up to 20 seconds of London Calling. Apple has introduced a simple and free way to create and sync its own custom ringtones for... In any case, most new mobile devices accept MP3 as tones. I'll be showing you some interesting resources to download mp3 ringtones for cell phones FOR FREE! Different people want different kinds of tones and we will try to cover something for everyone. Our first stop will be on the website, whose motto is: Most tones, wallpapers, videos and more for your phone. No subscriptions or hidden fees ever! Sounds right down our alley! So let's check it out. When you arrive at the site, you will see a homepage that looks like this: Top 15 tones right there on the home page that you can grab. You can also click on the tones at the top of the screen. Click on all the tones over the top 15 tones. When you find something you like, all you have to do is click on it. For example, I clicked on PICK UP YOUR PHONE!! ringtone and saw this: From this screen you can grab the ringtone in MP3 format, set up the ringtone, send it to a friend or download to your iPhone. They have really amazing features where you can text them to get a ringtone through the air. They have an eclectic collection of tones from music, movies and just some really wacky stuff like the one above! The next site I found has a huge collection of MP3 music, old classic songs, new songs all But the site has a lot of pop-up ads. So make sure your pop-up blocker is on or you're using IE 8 or FF 3.5. The mobiles24 site and that link will take you tagectly to a part of the site where you can download mp3 ringtones for mobile phones. You will also need to register or use BugMeNot to download them. I used BugMeNot and here's a link (hint: the first one doesn't work). When you get there you will see a place to sort and search for tones. You can press the button next to the ringtone to play on your computer. Go ahead and choose the one you like and click on its name. I chose Mrs. Robinson Simon and Garfunkel - the man I loved this track! It gave the young boys boys to get with an elderly woman when I was growing up. This will take you to a screen with a link to a download like this: Once you enter (top left corner) you'll see screen changes to allow you to download like this: Go ahead and download in your heart content or 30 credits worth it (depending on what comes first). By downloading the track, transfer it to your device, or you can download the ringtone tagectly from your phone, following WAP instructions. Do you have another site that has free ringtones for mobile phones? If so leave them in the comments so we can all take advantage. If you find some great tones on these sites or whatever, leave them in the comments as well! At the same time, why not check out two tones related to articles we've done in the past - one Saikat and one Mark. Thank you for listening and enjoying!
